Types of leather offered by Arka Trading Company

Types of leather based on the production method

Generally, leather types are divided into two categories based on their production method: natural leather and synthetic leather. Natural leather is made from tanning and preparing the skin of animals such as cows, sheep, ostriches, and so on. This high-quality leather type can be divided into different types:

Light leather

This type of leather is obtained from the skins of animals such as sheep, lambs, and goats. Light leather is less thick compared to other types of leather; therefore, it is known by this name. Light leather is mostly used for the production of gloves, hats, and clothes due to its inherent features like comfort and lightness.

Semi-heavy leather

Semi-heavy leather is a particular leather among the types of natural leather available in the market. Semi-heavy leather is made from the skins of animals such as crocodiles and ostriches and is more expensive than other leathers. This type of leather is widely used in the manufacture of luxury goods due to its rarity, quality, and the high price.

Heavy leather

This type of leather is the best and highest-quality leather among other available types of leather in the market. This type of leather is made from the skin of cows, calves, or camels and is very durable. Its appearance gets more beautiful making your style so attractive over time and on a daily basis, and this is one of the remarkable points that the heavy leather has. Heavy leather is widely used to make leather shoes and bags because products such as bags and shoes are more vulnerable to damage compared to other leather products.

Nubuck leather

Nubuck leather has a velvety appearance like suede and split, but this type of leather is made with great delicacy with a soft surface.

Patent leather

Patent leather is made of calfskin and its surface is glazed and covered with a particular varnish to get a shiny appearance. This type of leather is used in the production of bags and shoes.

Ostrich leather

This type of skin is very thin while it is strong and firm. When the skin is trimmed, it is not cracked, shrunk, or stretched. It is also very durable and strong.

Printed leather

After the finishing stage (completion of the tanning process), patterns are created on its surface by passing it under special rollers that have different patterns (protrusions and depressions). The designs that are usually created on the surface of these leathers include shrunk, floater, buffalo, flower, lizard, snake, rhino, python, etc.

Split

Split is obtained from layering thick leathers and has a fluffy surface. The color of the split leather must be uniformed and so-called full colored (all its surface and depth must be painted) because the surface of the split leather is sanded after cutting, so it must be sanded evenly and smoothly. Some splits are hollow that can be very weak in terms of endurance and stability.

Suede leather

Suede leather is made of goat and calf skins, which creates its appearance through a special process and by special tools, and makes the fleshy surface velvety. This type of leather is mostly used as a liner inside other products. The difference between suede and split leather is that suede inner layer is fluffy, with a beautiful appearance and magnificent softness.

Effect (Cloud design) natural leather

Effect or Cloud-design natural leather, as its name implies, has a design like cloud. This type of natural leather is also called effect leather.

Elegant leather

This type of leather is one of the highest quality types of natural leathers, because it is made from the most superficial layer of cow and goat skins. Elegant is used in the production of handmade bags due to its high resistance and quality.

Shrunk leather

This type of leather can also be produced and supplied under the name floater. This product has more softness than other products and is one of the thick natural leathers that have good resistance against possible damages. This type of leather is made from cow hide.
